Undermining the US Constitution—One Mandate at a Time

There are 3 crimes in the Constitution—treason, piracy, and counterfeiting. Today there are 4500 federal crimes, sponsored by an ever-voracious federal government pursuing dictatorial power—hard at it, attacking a 233 year-old electoral college that gives states the right to enact their own balloting laws for national elections. Also in the crosshairs is the 180 year-old 'filibuster' (intended to slow political parties from taking tyrannical control), and, a push to do away with a long-time precedent, 9 member Supreme Court.

Simply stated, we are witnessing a prodigious effort on the part of the federal government to take over our nation and our lives. Agencies once regarded as guardians for the health and welfare of Americans (CDC and FDA), have now become politicized to the point of willingness to trade neutrality for administration and corporate dictates.

Do Americans get the gravity of this? Do they understand that a shift of power to federal/corporate takes 'states rights' off the table? Do they see that Congress functions not as a federal institution—but the intended place where state representatives gather to hash out the 'will of the people'? The drift now is to put more and more control in the hands of a federal/corporate elite, bypassing Congress, using 'narrow findings' from courts as rubber stamps, in support of 'executive branch' rule by decree.

Under the Biden Bunch this became painfully obvious this past year, with 'identity politics' taking over, allowing for 'good fascism' (ANTIFA), and 'good racism' (Black Lives Matter). But, those developments pale when compared to a politicized federal takeover of our kids—without 'due process'. This ultimate insult, inflicted under the banner of federal education, undermines and destroys American cohesiveness. An uncontrolled hubris, using a 'critical race theory'—'trans' agenda, has resulted in policies that allow 12 year-old kids to make personal 'vaccine' choices without parent consent.

This is sold to Americans as 'freedom of choice': "Youngsters deserve the right to protect themselves." But that involves at least two contradictions: The 'youngsters' are children, incapable of 'informed consent' decisions, even if they were given needed information, which they are not. Those who remain unvaccinated, relying on the judgment of their parents, are ostracized by their fellow students (only 28% of California children 11-17 remain 'unvaccinated'). And they are propagandized by school administration who are heavily bought-into government hype about 'safe and effective' jabs.

Congress is its own 'nest of vipers'. Not all senators and representatives undermine the Constitution, but the majority attack it with impunity—handing over legislative function to agencies that persist long after legislatures slip in history. Leaving agencies to function as mini-legislatures, subject to and directed by corporate influence.

A few articles back, I speculated that the federal government and corporations are under the sway of Big Pharma—which would explain the willingness of mega business to accede to 'mandates' that make it more difficult to make a buck. Why CEOs go along with the program can be seen in 3 men (that drive corporate America)—CEOs of three major corporations: Larry Fink, 'BlackRock', Joseph Hooley, 'State Street', and Mortimer Buckley, 'Vanguard'. Together they are the largest shareholders of 40% of all publicly listed firms in the US—with $11 trillion under management. And each of these men has enormous ties to Pharma—as sitting heads of huge medical BODs. No CEO, of the 40% of listed firms under these men would dare to resist 'dictates from above'.

I saw a sign today that frames our dilemma: "Your obedience is prolonging the nightmare." This statement takes in those CEO's who don't speak up and anyone else who is made obedient by the propaganda or has been threatened with a job loss. And, though things seem slightly positive right now, with omicron posing a small threat, it might provide but a short-term victory for individual freedom or any return to normalcy.

I say that because this is a time when people could easily rise up and knock the elite from a pedestal. Their narrative is failing and response from the elite will be directed to saving themselves, with their power intact, to achieve 'total control' in the coming fights.

They will try to present a unified front, something along these lines: We beat this thing back but now we have to adjust to an ongoing flu-like, weakened viral version. They need to sell this narrative to remain viable and get back to the real mission—as expressed by Pfizer's CEO referring to those with safety concerns for untested jabs, as 'criminals' who should be brought to justice. Or, New York Governor Hochul (new to the job), who mandated masks in public places for all NY's, age 2 and older. A state SC judge said no—that she lacks the authority for such a mandate—that authority belongs to the legislature. Instead of taking her mandate to the legislature—she vows to fight it.

With all the 'vaccine' promises having been broken, it would seem the left would recognize at least a couple of them. None of the promises (masks, distancing, lockdowns, mandated inoculations, and enforced penalties for the un-inoculated), proved to stop transmission or infection. Now, with 'vaccine hesitant' treated as 'criminals', one cannot but recall Mark Twain's suggestion that it's easier to fool someone than convince them they have been fooled. Begging the question: How deep does obedience to fools, go?

But, we ain't seen nothing yet. Because of failing 'Fauci perception', we might see some backoff from the elite, to ensure that the pitchforks don't come out. But have no doubt that the propaganda campaign will continue—unabated—from 'oath breakers'.

Just because medical lockdowns may get a setback, watch two more things designed to keep us home and totally under control. Electric vehicles will keep us close to home because there is no viable means to produce enough electricity and batteries for even a fraction of drivers. Electricity will be rationed, and 50 MPG gas mandates (if the left can simply steal 2 elections), will put an end to: "See the USA in your Chevrolet".

Only EV and hybrid are capable of 50 MPG—cost-pricing out most of us. And, in a locked-down crypto dollar, any who question the elite get but one option—stay home.
